Recession threat behind global policymakers' go-slow focus

Economic officials worldwide have reacted with restraint to signs of spreading weakness

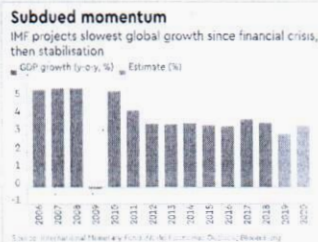

RICH MILLER & ENDA CURRAN October 18

GLOBAL ECONOMIC POLICYMAKERS may risk making the perfect the enemy of the good.

From the Federal Reserve in the US to the European Central Bank in Germany, the People's Bank of China, economic authorities have reacted with restraint to signs of spreading weakness worldwide.

As officials gather in Washington for the annual International Monetary Fund meeting, the danger on minds is that they will miss the severity of the slowdown — as they seek to calibrate policy just right — and allow the risk of a recession to morph into reality.

The global outlook remains precarious with a synchronised slowdown and uncertain recovery, IMF chief economist Gita Gopinath wrote in an October 15 blog post.

Source: International Monetary Fund, Global Economic Outlook, October 2019

Citing a broad deceleration as trade tensions undermine the expansion, the IMF this week cut its 2019 global growth forecast to 3%, the weakest performance since 2009 — on an output-at-rank and the financial system tottered.

Policy makers kept pulled out the stops to fight the downturn, slashing interest rates to rock bottom levels and opening up the spending spigot.

The stakes now are not nearly that great, especially since the putative US-China trade truce has reduced — at least for now — the biggest risk to the outlook.

financial stability," said Shaun Roache, S&P Global Ratings' Asia-Pacific chief economist. The downside is that growth next year could slip below 6%, the most tepid pace in decades.

The Chinese slowdown has sideswiped Japan's export-dependent economy. But rather than responding with a looser fiscal stance, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe pressed ahead with an October 1 consumption tax increase that he says is needed to improve the government's finances but which some economists fear could trigger a downturn.

The push to tighten budget policy — even though countermeasures such as tax breaks on buying cars were also rolled out — will pressure the BOJ to expand already unprecedented stimulus measures.

Germany has also felt fallout from China's slowdown and looks to be on the brink of a recession. Yet the government has so far resisted rolling out a big budget package.

That's despite pleas from outgoing European Central Bank President Mario Draghi that fiscal policy makers should step up after the central bank resumed quantitative easing last month.

Thousands converge in Barcelona for fifth day of Catalan protests

REUTERS Barcelona, October 18

TENS OF THOUSANDS of demonstrators waving Catalan flags and chanting "Independence" and "Freedom for political prisoners" poured into Barcelona on Friday, the fifth day of protests against the jailing of separatist leaders. Many of the marchers began their journeys to the city on Wednesday from municipalities across the northeastern Spanish region, after the Supreme Court sentenced nine separatists to up to 13 years in jail over a failed bid to break away from Spain in 2017.

The sentences set off the worst sustained street violence Spain has seen in decades, and Friday's protests, that also included workers on strike, will be closely watched by authorities in Madrid.

"Throughout this week, as you well know, there have been violent incidents in Catalonia. They have been organised — by groups who are a minority but are very organised," Interior Minister Fernando Grande-Marlaska told a news conference. "Their actions, as we have already said, will also not go unpunished."

Friday's marches have so far been peaceful, ranging from families pushing prams to cyclists wheeling their bicycles and people draped in the Catalan independence flag, who took over a highway lane and other major roads as they walked towards the Catalan capital. Some in Barcelona stood by the side of the roads, applauding as the walkers arrived.

Protesters walking on a highway towards Barcelona carried a giant banner reading, in English: "Free Catalan Prisoners Now."

Several main streets in Barcelona were closed to traffic in anticipation of the marches. Regional trains and the city's metro were running on a reduced timetable after pro-independence unions called a strike.

Barcelona's main landmark, the multi-spired Sagrada Família cathedral designed by Antoni Gaudi, was shut down due to the protests, an official told Reuters.

The Spanish soccer federation (RFEF) said in a statement that Barcelona's October 26 home match against Real Madrid, one of the biggest rivalries in the sport, had been postponed due to security concerns.

US astronauts make history with first all-female spacewalk

AGENCIES Washington, October 17

US ASTRONAUTS CHRISTINA Koch and Jessica Meir became the first all-female pair to carry out a spacewalk in history, following a spacecraft launch earlier this year that caused the historic mission to be aborted.

"Christina, you may express the airlock," spacecraft commander Stephanie Wilson told the pair shortly after they set out to replace a power controller on the International Space Station at 11:38 GMT. They began their mission making standard safety checks on their suits and leathers, before making their way to the repair site.

In a call to reporters a few minutes earlier, NASA administrator Jim Bridenstine emphasised its symbolic importance.

They said they were excited to take place in March but was canceled because the space agency had only one medium-sized suit, with a male-female combination performing the required task at a later date.

Traditionally male dominated NASA's failure to be adequately prepared was denounced in some quarters as evidence of implicit sexism.

Permafrost thawing may cost Russia $2.3 bn a year

YULIYA FEDORINOVA & OLGA TANAS October 18

RUSSIA PLANS TO pay more attention to the impact climate change is having on its vast permafrost area.

Thawing of once permanently frozen ground means more than half of Russia is putting buildings, pipelines and other infrastructure at risk of damage. With the Arctic warming twice as fast as the rest of the world, that's a big problem. The economic loss is $0 billion to 150 billion rubles ($2.3 billion) a year, said Alexander Krutikov, deputy minister for the Far East and Arctic development.

"This problem needs to be addressed because the amount of damage will grow every year," Krutikov said in an interview. "The scale is very serious. The pipes explode, the pipes collapse." Krutikov's comments are another sign that Russia, the world's fourth-biggest emitter, is taking the effects of climate change more seriously. For most of his time in power, President Vladimir Putin has challenged the widely held assertion that global warming is caused almost exclusively to human activity. Still, he finally decided to ratify the 2015 Paris climate accord this year and said Russia must do whatever it can to mitigate the impact of global warming.

Rising temperatures are a particular worry for mining, oil and gas companies. The permafrost area accounts for 15% of Russia's oil and 80% of its gas operations. It is also home to miners in the Norilsk-Nickel, the biggest refined nickel and palladium producer. Russia has long built structures on piles to improve stable in the permafrost. But as the ground warms it becomes softer, and there are signs problems are increasing.

"Buildings lost stability as the permafrost warmed," Norilsk said. That prompted the Arctic city to build the first new homes in decades, with fewer floors and weighing less than traditional properties. Multiple new craters have also been found in the gas-rich Yamal region, which is a risk to pipelines, and some houses had had to be pulled down in Norilsk, the industrial town where Norilsk operates.

The city of Norilsk has put about a quarter of homes on special watch over their foundation stability, according to the 'Yamalskiy Telegraph. Diamond miner Alrosa PJSC is carefully monitoring ground temperatures and has a special department to supervise the permafrost, a spokeswoman said.
