NOTICE

Mandatory Transfer of Equity Shares of the Bank to Investor Education and Protection Fund (IEPF)

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to the provisions of Section 124(6) of the Companies Act, 2013 (Act) read with the Investor Education and Protection Authority (Acting, Transfer and Refund) Rules 2016 (the "Rules"), as amended from time to time, the equity shares of the Bank in respect of which the dividend has remained undrawn / unpaid for a period of seven consecutive years or more are required to be transferred by the Bank to the Demat. Account of IEPF Authority.

As per the rules, the Bank has sent individual notices to the concerned shareholders, who did not claim their IEPF Accounts for seven consecutive years and whose shares are liable to be transferred to IEPF Account, advising them to claim their unclaimed dividend. A list of such shareholders, who have not claimed their dividends for seven consecutive years and whose shares are therefore liable for transfer to IEPF Account is displayed on the website of the Bank at http://www.tbml.co.in/shares_holders. Shareholders are requested to refer the said website to verify the details of unclaimed dividend and the shares which are liable to be transferred to IEPF Account.

The concerned shareholders, holding shares in physical form and whose shares are liable to be transferred to IEPF Account, may note that the Bank would be issuing duplicate share certificates in lieu of the original share certificates held by them for the purpose of transfer of shares to the IEPF Suspense Account as per the said Rules and upon such issue, the original share certificates (which were registered in their name) will stand automatically cancelled and be deemed non-negotiable. The shareholders may further note that the details uploaded by the Bank on its website should be deemed to be adequate notice in respect of issue of the duplicate share certificate(s) by the Bank for the purpose of transfer of shares to the IEPF Suspense Account pursuant to the Rules.

Notice is also hereby given to the shareholders that in case the Bank does not receive any communication from the concerned shareholders on or before 21.12.2018 for claiming the unpaid dividend, the Bank shall with a view to comply with the requirement of the Rules proceed to initiate action for transfer of shares to IEPF Account without any further notice.

Please note that no claim shall be against the Bank in respect of the unclaimed dividend and the shares transferred to IEPF Account. Shareholders can claim shares and dividend transferred to IEPF by complying our procedure given in the Rules, details of which are also available at www.tbml.co.in.

Mumbai airport: 37 flights delayed as Air India ground-handling staff go on strike

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Mumbai, November 8

AS MANY AS 37 Air India flights, including some international ones, were affected on Thursday after a section of employees of the national carrier's ground-handling subsidiary, Air India Transport Services (AIATSI), went on a flash strike against non-payment of Diwali bonus and other issues, an official said.

The AIATSI employees struck work at the Mumbai airport on Wednesday and Thursday, demanding payment of Diwali bonus and reinstatement of three of their colleagues whose contracts were not renewed by the company, he said.

AIATSI, a wholly owned subsidiary of the national carrier, provides ground handling services to Air India and other ports in the country. It has about 5,000 employees, including those on contract. "Some AIATSI employees at the Mumbai airport are on strike since Wednesday Thursday (intervening) night over non-payment of Diwali Bonus and reinstatement of the services of some of their former colleagues. This stand-off has resulted in flight operations getting hampered," the official said.

He said around 37 flights, including international ones, were delayed by 2.5 hours-3 hours till 1500 hours on Thursday. However, no flight has been cancelled so far, he added.

INTERVIEW: SUNDAR PICHAI, CEO, Google

Google is facing new challenges today than at any time in its 20-year history. Employees are unhappy and want more autonomy. Executives are under scrutiny for an effort to secretly make a censored version of its search product for China. Google will shut down its social network next year after a data breach was discovered. Political and social debates, including one over building military-grade artificial intelligence, are rife in the workplace.

Yet the man responsible for leading Google through this minefield is not one of the company's founders — Larry Page and Sergey Brin — or even Eric Schmidt, the company's former chief executive and chairman, who was ushered aside last year. Instead, the man in charge of arguably the most influential company in the world is Sundar Pichai, a soft-spoken engineer who grew up in Chennai.

Pichai was a voracious reader as a boy, and attended the prestigious Indian Institute of Technology (IIT), then Stanford and the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. He received advanced degrees after stints at Applied Materials and McKinsey, he joined Google in 2004.

Pichai helped develop the company's browser, Chrome, and in 2014 he took over product, engineering and research efforts for the company's products and platforms, including search, ads and Android. He was made chief executive in 2015, and joined the board of Alphabet, Google's parent, last year.

In an interview with NVT, Pichai spoke on various issues.

Tell me about growing up in Chennai.

There was a simplicity to my life when I was growing up. We lived with today's world. We were in a kind of modest house, shared with tenants. We would sleep on the living room floor. There was a drought when I was growing up, and we had an anxiety. Even now, I can never sleep without a bottle of water beside my bed. Other houses had refrigerators, and there were no air conditioners. It was a big deal.

I was processing a lot. I read whatever I could get my hands on. I read Dickens, poetry, playing street cricket, reading books — that was kind of the totality of life. But you never felt lacking for anything.

What was it like coming over to attend Stanford?

It was the first time I had ever been on a plane. I always knew that in the Valley, I kind of wanted to be there — everything had happened. I remember landing in California, and I stayed with a host family for about a week. I was in the car going from the airport, and it was like, "Wow, it's so brown here." The family was like, "We like to call it golden."

When I was back at IIT, I had access to the computer laboratory — maybe I'd been in it three or four times. To come and just have these labs in which you had access to computers and you could program, it was a big deal to me. I was so wrapped up in that, that to some extent I didn't realise there was a much bigger shift happening with the internet.

'Technology doesn't solve humanity's problems'

You started at Google 14 years ago. Does it still feel like the same company you joined? When I first joined Google I was struck by the fact that it was a very idealistic, optimistic place. I still see that idealism and optimism a lot in many things we do today. But the world is different. Maybe there's more realism of how hard some things are. We've had more failures, too. But there's always been a strong streak of idealism in the company, and you still see it today.

Why does it seem so easy for tech companies like Google to ban pornography and graphic violence from social media platforms, but so much harder for them to root out propaganda, misinformation and disturbing content aimed at kids? There are areas where society clearly agrees what is OK and not OK, and then there are areas where it is hard as a society to draw the line. What is the difference between freedom of speech on something where you feel you're being discriminated against by another group, versus hate speech? The US and Europe draw the line differently on this question in a very fundamental way. We've had to defend videos which we allow in the US but in Europe people view as disseminating hate speech.

Should people be able to say that they don't believe climate change is real? Or that vaccines don't work? It's just a genuinely hard problem. We're all using human reviewers, but human reviewers make mistakes, too. How do you approach this in China, where Google is considering returning to the market with a search engine? "Wow, there's a lot of challenges," I always say. "There's no better time to be alive." I go through the exercise of placing myself in different times in the world. If you were alive during World War I, or influenza, or the Great Depression, and there's World War II coming. If you were in the 1960s, and Martin Luther King was shot dead, and RFK would later get shot dead, and we were in Vietnam and there was a Cold War and a Cuban missile crisis — there is no better time to be alive. But having said that, I think as humanity we're increasingly dealing with bigger things. As a company like Google, we have a deeper mission, and we feel the weight of that on our shoulders. I feel like people are emerging and people want to change and make the world better.

Do you worry that Silicon Valley is suffering from groupthink and losing its edge? There's nothing inherent that says Silicon Valley will always be the most innovative place in the world. There is no God given right to be that way. But I feel confident that right now, as we speak, there are quietly people in the valley working on something which will later look back in 10 years and feel very profound. We feel we're on the cusp of technologies, just like the internet before.

Do you still feel like Silicon Valley has retained that idealism that struck you when you arrived here? There's still that optimism. But the optimism is tempered by a sense of deliberation. Things have changed quite a bit. You know, we deliberate about things a lot more, and we do more thoughtful about what we do. But there's a deeper thing here, which is: Technology does not solve humanity's problems. It was always naive to think so. Technology is an enabler, but humanity has to deal with humanity's problems. I think we're both over-reliant on technology as a way to solve things and probably, at this moment, over-indexing on technology as a source of all problems, too.
